Five Cool NYC Mommy and Me Classes

August 26, 2008

Mommy and Me classes can be salvation for new parents. At the least, they get you out of the house, build structure into your day, and help you meet other moms and dads. But even if you can't picture yourself singing nursery rhymes and skipping around at a typical Mommy and Me class, here are some of the best, cool and unique mommy (or daddy) and me classes that you might even enjoy just as much as your baby or toddler will.

It's just like your book club but your kids will actually have the time to read the books. Each week of class is themed around children's stories.

From tales of ocean life to pirates and princesses to dinosaurs, children will listen to book readings, share observations and participate in activities and projects that bring each story to life. There is a take home book from every class, so you will be able to enjoy these books together again and again (and just as you are getting sick of one you'll get another). By semester's end - your kids will have expanded their personal libraries by 16 books (over a $200 value) that they have a personal connection to.

SPECIAL PROMOTION: Register for this class in the month of August for the fall semester and receive an apple seeds backpack free! See website for details.
